Jeff Siegler is the Director of Revitalization for Heritage Ohio.

Jeff initially became involved in urban revitalization while studying off campus at The Philadelphia Center while completing his bachelor of arts in economics management at Ohio Wesleyan University. After graduating Jeff spent a number of years traveling in the United States and Europe.

While residing in Livingston, Montana Jeff volunteered collecting data for the Upper Yellowstone Coalition regarding the rapid change in land use in the Paradise Valley region. This solidified his decision to attend graduate school in the field of urban and regional planning.

Jeff received his Masters of Urban and Regional Planning with a concentration in urban revitalization from Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia. While attending VCU, Jeff worked for Robin Miller, a historic tax credit real estate developer, as a project manager and sales associate. While working for Miller and Associates, Jeff was involved in the renovation of historic single family homes, and adaptive reuse of a number of institutional, commercial and industrial buildings into apartments and condominiums.

Jeff and his wife Lauren moved to Ohio in July of 2005 upon the birth of their daughter, Audrey, and accepted the position as executive director of Main Street Lancaster and the Downtown Lancaster Special Improvement District. Jeff has been actively involved in the Lancaster community through Rotary, the Chamber of Commerce, and as a member of the Fairfield County Regional Planning Commission. He and his wife are currently in the process of renovating their 1926 Four-square home.
